

A KING DEPOSED.

The king in the darkness weeping
By the gates of his empire closed, The king from his realm deposed.

They passed him, going to worship;
And, wailing, behind he crept;
And coldly they bade him be silent Because that the new king slept.

They lifted him up to the cradle,
Their fingers laid on his lips;
And they touched one baby dimple With his own little fingertips.

They sat him down in the nursery With a little love-love heart breaking lay with his child's heart breaking, sobbing himself to sleep.

They have taken his baby scepter, They have taken his robe and crown;
They have driven him out of his palace,
And scattered his house-flag down.

A new king rules in his kingdom;
For him are the gold gates closed;
And they think that he does not notice That poor little king deposed!

—Will H. Ogilvie, Century.

FAMILY JAR IN PUBLIC.

Through jars in a public place Where family jars should never be,
I stood face to face,
When suddenly she rushed at me.

She brushed her with no gentle touch;
She brushed me as crimson as the rose,
And I stood face to face,
When suddenly she rushed at me.

She brushed her by the arm, and she,
Her face as crimson as the rose,
And I stood face to face,
When suddenly she rushed at me.

She brushed her by the arm, and she,
Her face as crimson as the rose,
And I stood face to face,
When suddenly she rushed at me.

She brushed her by the arm, and she,
Her face as crimson as the rose,
And I stood face to face,
When suddenly she rushed at me.

She brushed her by the arm, and she,
Her face as crimson as the rose,
And I stood face to face,
When suddenly she rushed at me.

NOTES.

The heavy, arm-breaking temperature of the past is dominating buyers cannot have failed to note a marked improvement in the up of the new books of certain publishers—their increased lightness of weight, their reduced price, and their convenient size. These changes have been made in the English language, the American in this respect, most lightweight paper used by publishers had to be imported from abroad. But about five years ago American publishers began the aggressive campaign for a home-made lightweight paper. The model to be followed here was the English Espino paper, made from esparto grass, which grows only in North Africa, Spain and southern Spain. This paper is made in limited quantities in England, because of the scarce-ness of the grass. At the repeated insistence of publishers, several American manufacturers commenced experiments in the light paper. At first the paper was made, The American, though light, lacked the necessary cohesiveness—a fatal defect, work was persisted in, however, success was achieved, in the last few years, and the American lightweight paper is now coming into general use. Made of it, a book weighs less 30 and 40 per cent less than one of equal size made of the old heavy paper. The lightweight paper is not smooth, and to the uninformed it appears to be rough, and cheaply made. But, as a matter of fact, rough paper is decidedly more desirable to make. It is to be hoped this long-sought improvement in book-making will be strenuously persued by the publishers.

There are two American women writing the present book character more easily and sympathetically than others. They are Josephine Dodge and Sarah P. McLean Greene.
Dodge's method differs substantially from Mrs. Greene's, but in both the boys they depict live.
Mrs. Greene's Everybody knows Miss Gladys, and Mrs. Greene's Everybody knows Gladys are rivaling popularity. One of Mrs. Greene's admirers has written her: "I can find for your next book more little clues as interesting as in 'Everybody knows Gladys'."

Both that and the recent volume should occupy a place in every library, as the material dealt with and facts and incidents contained in them make them a valuable contribution to American history.
Added to these is the charm of an excellent literary style which distinguishes the author as a man of letters as well as experience, observation and learning. That Mr. Foster is well qualified to write upon his chosen subjects is apparent from his record, which shows him to have occupied during different periods the following positions: Former secretary of state, United States minister in Mexico, Russia, and Spain; general plenipotentiary to Great Britain, Germany, San Domingo, Japan and China; and member of the Anglo-American joint high commission.

In the vast mass of literature on Asiatic subjects there is not to be found a consecutive history of American relations with that important section of the globe. Since the acquisition of Hawaii and the Philippine Islands to the American domain the need for such a work has been all the greater. Mr. Foster's book is designed to show the part which the United States has taken, and the position it now occupies, in respect to the political, commercial and race questions in the Orient. It reviews the early American commercial intercourse with China, the policy observed towards that country, the opening of Japan, the political history and annexation of Hawaii, and the relation of the United States to the later history of China, Japan, Korea, Samoa, and other countries of the Pacific. Mr. Foster pays special attention to the results of the Sino-Japan war in the far east, and gives many interesting incidents connected with oriental statesmen, which show the honorable part the United States has borne in the stirring events of the Pacific.

Mr. Foster's earlier book on American Diplomacy owed its success, not only to the authority which his intimate knowledge of our diplomatic history gave it, but also to his clear, concise, and readable style, an excellence which equally marks this present work.

A Boy on a Farm is just published by Jacob Abbott. Edited by Clifton Johnson, with an introduction by Dr. Lyman Abbott. Intended for third-grade supplementary reading, this addition to the well-known and widely used series of Eclectic school readings presents two stories of Jacob Abbott in new and attractive form. The ethical discussions and explanations have been largely eliminated, and thus revised, these popular stories are admirably suited to hold the interest of young readers and to do excellent work in training youthful instincts naturally and healthfully. The stories have a distinct educational effect, both mental and moral; they teach industry, honesty and all the other virtues of a good citizen. The stories are numerous and pleasing, and have been drawn especially for the book.

Andrews' Botany all the Year Round, by E. Andrews, is a book admirably adapted for botanical work in the average high school, and requires no explanation, and in this respect meets the popular demand. The lessons are so arranged that each subject is taken up just at the time of year when the material for it is most abundant. In this way the study can be carried on all the year round, a plan which is much more sensible than crowding the whole course into a few weeks of the spring term.
The language of the text is very simple and direct. Botanical terms are introduced only as required. The book is illustrated to make accurate observations of plant life, then the essential organs of the plant are taken up, and finally the so-called surroundings, ecology. The book is accurate, and sufficiently full and complete to meet the needs of secondary schools. The work required can easily be done, and will prove thoroughly educative.—American Book Co.

KEEPING A SECRET.

When Lord Wellington was commander of an army in India, a certain rich man offered him $500,000 for some secret information on a very important question. Wellington looked thoughtful for a few minutes, and then he said: "He temptation. But he was not. He was only considering the best way to answer his tempter. At length he said:
"It appears that you can keep a secret sir."

"Certainly," said the man, feeling sure that he had gained his point.
"So can I!" rejoined Wellington.
"Good morning, sir," and the man went away with a crestfallen air.

Thus, you see, Wellington was proof against temptation. He rejected a bribe of half a million dollars. Wasn't that noble?—Men of Tomorrow.

HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS.

A nervous, irritable mother, often on the verge of hysterics, is unfit to care for children; it ruins a child's disposition and reacts upon herself. The trouble between children and their mothers too often is due to the fact that the mother has some female weakness, and she is entirely unfit to bear the strain upon her nerves that governing a child involves; it is impossible for her to do anything calmly. She cannot help it, as her condition is due to suffering and shattered nerves caused by some derangement of the uterine system with backache, headache, and all kinds of pain, and she is on the verge of nervous prostration.

When a mother finds that she cannot be calm and quiet with her children, she may be sure that her condition needs attention, and she cannot do better than to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.
This medicine will build up her system, strengthen her nerves, and enable her to calmly handle a disobedient child without a scene. The children will soon realize the difference, and seeing their mother quiet, will themselves become quiet.

Mrs. May Brown, of Chicago, Ill., says:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I honor to whom honor is due, and you deserve both the thanks and honor of the mothers of America whom you have so blessedly helped and benefited. I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when I would feel run-down, nervous and irritable, or have any of the aches and pains which but few women escape, and I have found that it relieved me at once and gave me new strength. Several ladies, members of our Literary Union, speak in the highest praise of your Vegetable Compound, as they have been cured from serious female troubles. One lady, who thought she must submit to an operation, was cured without using anything in the world but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash.
You have hosts of friends in Chicago, and if you came to visit our city we would delight to do you honor. Gratefully yours,—MRS. MAY BROWN, 57 Grant Place, Chicago, Ill.

How Mrs. Pinkham Helped Mrs. McKinny.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it my duty to write and let you know the good you and your Vegetable Compound are doing. I had been sick ever since my first baby was born, and at the birth of my second, my doctor, as well as myself thought I should never live through it. After that menstruation never came regular, and when it came I suffered terribly. I also had womb and ovarian trouble. A friend of my husband's advised him to get Lydia E.
Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me. At first I had no faith in it, but now nothing could induce me to be without it. Menstruation has become regular, and I feel like a new woman. Your medicine is a God-send to suffering women. I hope this letter will lead others to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Yours truly, Mrs. MILDRED MCKINNEY, 28 Pearl St., San Francisco, Cal. (March 16, 1901).
